

Fiqh

Fiqh (/fiːk/^[1] Arabic: فقه [fiqh]) is Islamic jurisprudence.^[2] Fiqh is often described as the human understanding and practices of the sharia,^[3] that is human understanding of the divine Islamic law as revealed in the Quran and the Sunnah (the teachings and practices of the Islamic prophet Muhammad and His companions). Fiqh expands and develops Shariah through interpretation (ijtihad) of the Quran and Sunnah by Islamic jurists (ulama)^[3] and is implemented by the rulings (fatwa) of jurists on questions presented to them. Thus, whereas sharia is considered immutable and infallible by Muslims, fiqh is considered fallible and changeable. Fiqh deals with the observance of rituals, morals and social legislation in Islam as well as political system. In the modern era, there are four prominent schools (madh'hab) of fiqh within Sunni practice, plus two (or three) within Shi'a practice. A person trained in fiqh is known as a faqīh (plural fuqaha).^[4]

	Fiqh
Arabic	فقه
Romanization	Fiqh
Literal meaning	"deep understanding" "full comprehension"

Figuratively, fiqh means knowledge about Islamic legal rulings from their sources and deriving religious rulings from their sources necessitates the mujtahid (an individual who exercises ijtihad) to have a deep understanding in the different discussions of jurisprudence. A faqīh must look deep down into a matter and not suffice himself with just the apparent meaning, and a person who only knows the appearance of a matter is not qualified as a faqīh.^[2]

The studies of fiqh, are traditionally divided into Uṣūl al-fiqh (principles of Islamic jurisprudence, lit. the roots of fiqh, alternatively transliterated as Usool al-fiqh), the methods of legal interpretation and analysis; and Furūʿ al-fiqh (lit. the branches of fiqh), the elaboration of rulings on the basis of these principles.^{[5][6]} Furūʿ al-fiqh is the product of the application of Uṣūl al-fiqh and the total product of human efforts at understanding the divine will. A hukm (plural aḥkām) is a particular ruling in a given case.

Contents

Etymology

History

Diagram of early scholars

Components

Component categories

Methodologies of jurisprudence

Fields of jurisprudence

Schools of jurisprudence

Influence on Western laws

See also

References

Notes

Citations

Bibliography

Further reading

External links

Etymology

The word fiqh is an Arabic term meaning "deep understanding"^{[7]:470} or "full comprehension". Technically it refers to the body of Islamic law extracted from detailed Islamic sources (which are studied in the principles of Islamic jurisprudence) and the process of gaining knowledge of Islam through jurisprudence. The historian Ibn Khaldun describes fiqh as "knowledge of the rules of God which concern the actions of persons who own themselves connected to obey the law respecting what is required (wajib), sinful (haraam), recommended (mandūb), disapproved (makrūh) or neutral (mubah)".^[8] This definition is consistent amongst the jurists.

In Modern Standard Arabic, fiqh has also come to mean Islamic jurisprudence.^[9] It is not thus possible to speak of Chief Justice John Roberts as an expert in the common law fiqh of the United States, or of Egyptian legal scholar Abd El-Razzak El-Sanhuri as an expert in the civil law fiqh of Egypt.

History

According to traditional Islamic history, Islamic law followed a chronological path of:

- Allah-> Muhammad-> Companions-> Followers-> Fiqh.^[10]

The commands and prohibitions chosen by God^[11] were revealed through the agency of the Prophet in both the Quran and the Sunnah (words, deeds, and examples of the Prophet passed down as hadith). The first Muslims (the Sahabah or Companions) heard and obeyed, and passed this essence of Islam^[12] to succeeding generations (Tabi'un and Tabi' al-Tabi'in or successors/followers and successors of successors), as Muslims and Islam spread from West Arabia to the conquered lands north, east, and west,^{[13][Note 1]} where it was systematized and elaborated^[12]

The history of Islamic jurisprudence is "customarily divided into eight periods".^[15]

- the first period ending with the death of Muhammad in 11 AH.^[15]
- second period "characterized by personal interpretations" of the canon by the Sahabah or companions of Muhammad, lasting until 50 AH.^[15]
- from 50 AH until the early second century AH there was competition between a "a traditionalist approach to jurisprudence" in western Arabia where Islam was revealed and a "rationalist approach in Iraq".^[15]
- the "golden age of classical Islamic jurisprudence" from the "early second to the mid-fourth century when the eight "most significant" schools of Sunni and Shi'i jurisprudence emerged."^[15]
- from the mid-fourth century to mid-seventh AH Islamic jurisprudence was "limited to elaborations within the main juristic schools".^[15]
- the "dark age" of Islamic jurisprudence stretched from the fall of Baghdad in the mid-seventh AH (1258 CE) to 1293 AH/1876 CE.
- In 1293 AH (1876 CE) the Ottomans codified Hanafi jurisprudence in the Majallah el-Ahkam-i-Adliya. Several "juristic revival movements" influenced by "exposure to Western legal and technological progress" followed until the mid-20th century CE. Muhammad Abduh and Abd El-Razzak El-Sanhuri were products of this era.^[15]
- The most recent era has been that of the "Islamic revival", which has been "predicated on rejection of Western social and legal advances" and the development of specifically Islamic states, social sciences, economics, and finance.^[15]

The formative period of Islamic jurisprudence stretches back to the time of the early Muslim communities. In this period, jurists were more concerned with issues of authority and teaching than with theory and methodology.^[16]

Progress in theory and methodology happened with the coming of the early Muslim jurist Muhammad ibn Idris ash-Shafi'i (767–820), who codified the basic principles of Islamic jurisprudence in his book ar-Risālah. The book details the four roots of law (Qur'an, Sunnah, ijma, and qiyas) while specifying that the primary Islamic texts (the Qur'an and the hadith) be understood according to objective rules of interpretation derived from scientific study of the Arabic language.^[17]

Secondary sources of law were developed and refined over the subsequent centuries, consisting primarily of juristic preference (istihsan), laws of the previous prophets (shara man qablana), continuity (istishab), extended analogy (maslaha mursala), blocking the means (sadd al-dhari'ah), local customs (urf), and sayings of a companion of the Prophet (qawl al-sahabi).^[18]

Diagram of early scholars

The Quran set the rights, the responsibilities and the rules for people and for societies to adhere to, like not dealing in interest. Muhammad then provided an example, which is recorded in the hadith books, showing people how he practically implemented these rules in a society. After the passing of Muhammad, there was a need for jurists, to decide on new legal matters where there is no such ruling in the Quran or the Hadith, example of Islamic prophet Muhammad regarding a similar case.^{[19][20]}

In the years proceeding Muhammad, the community in Madina continued to use the same rules. People were familiar with the practice of Muhammad and therefore continued to use the same rules.

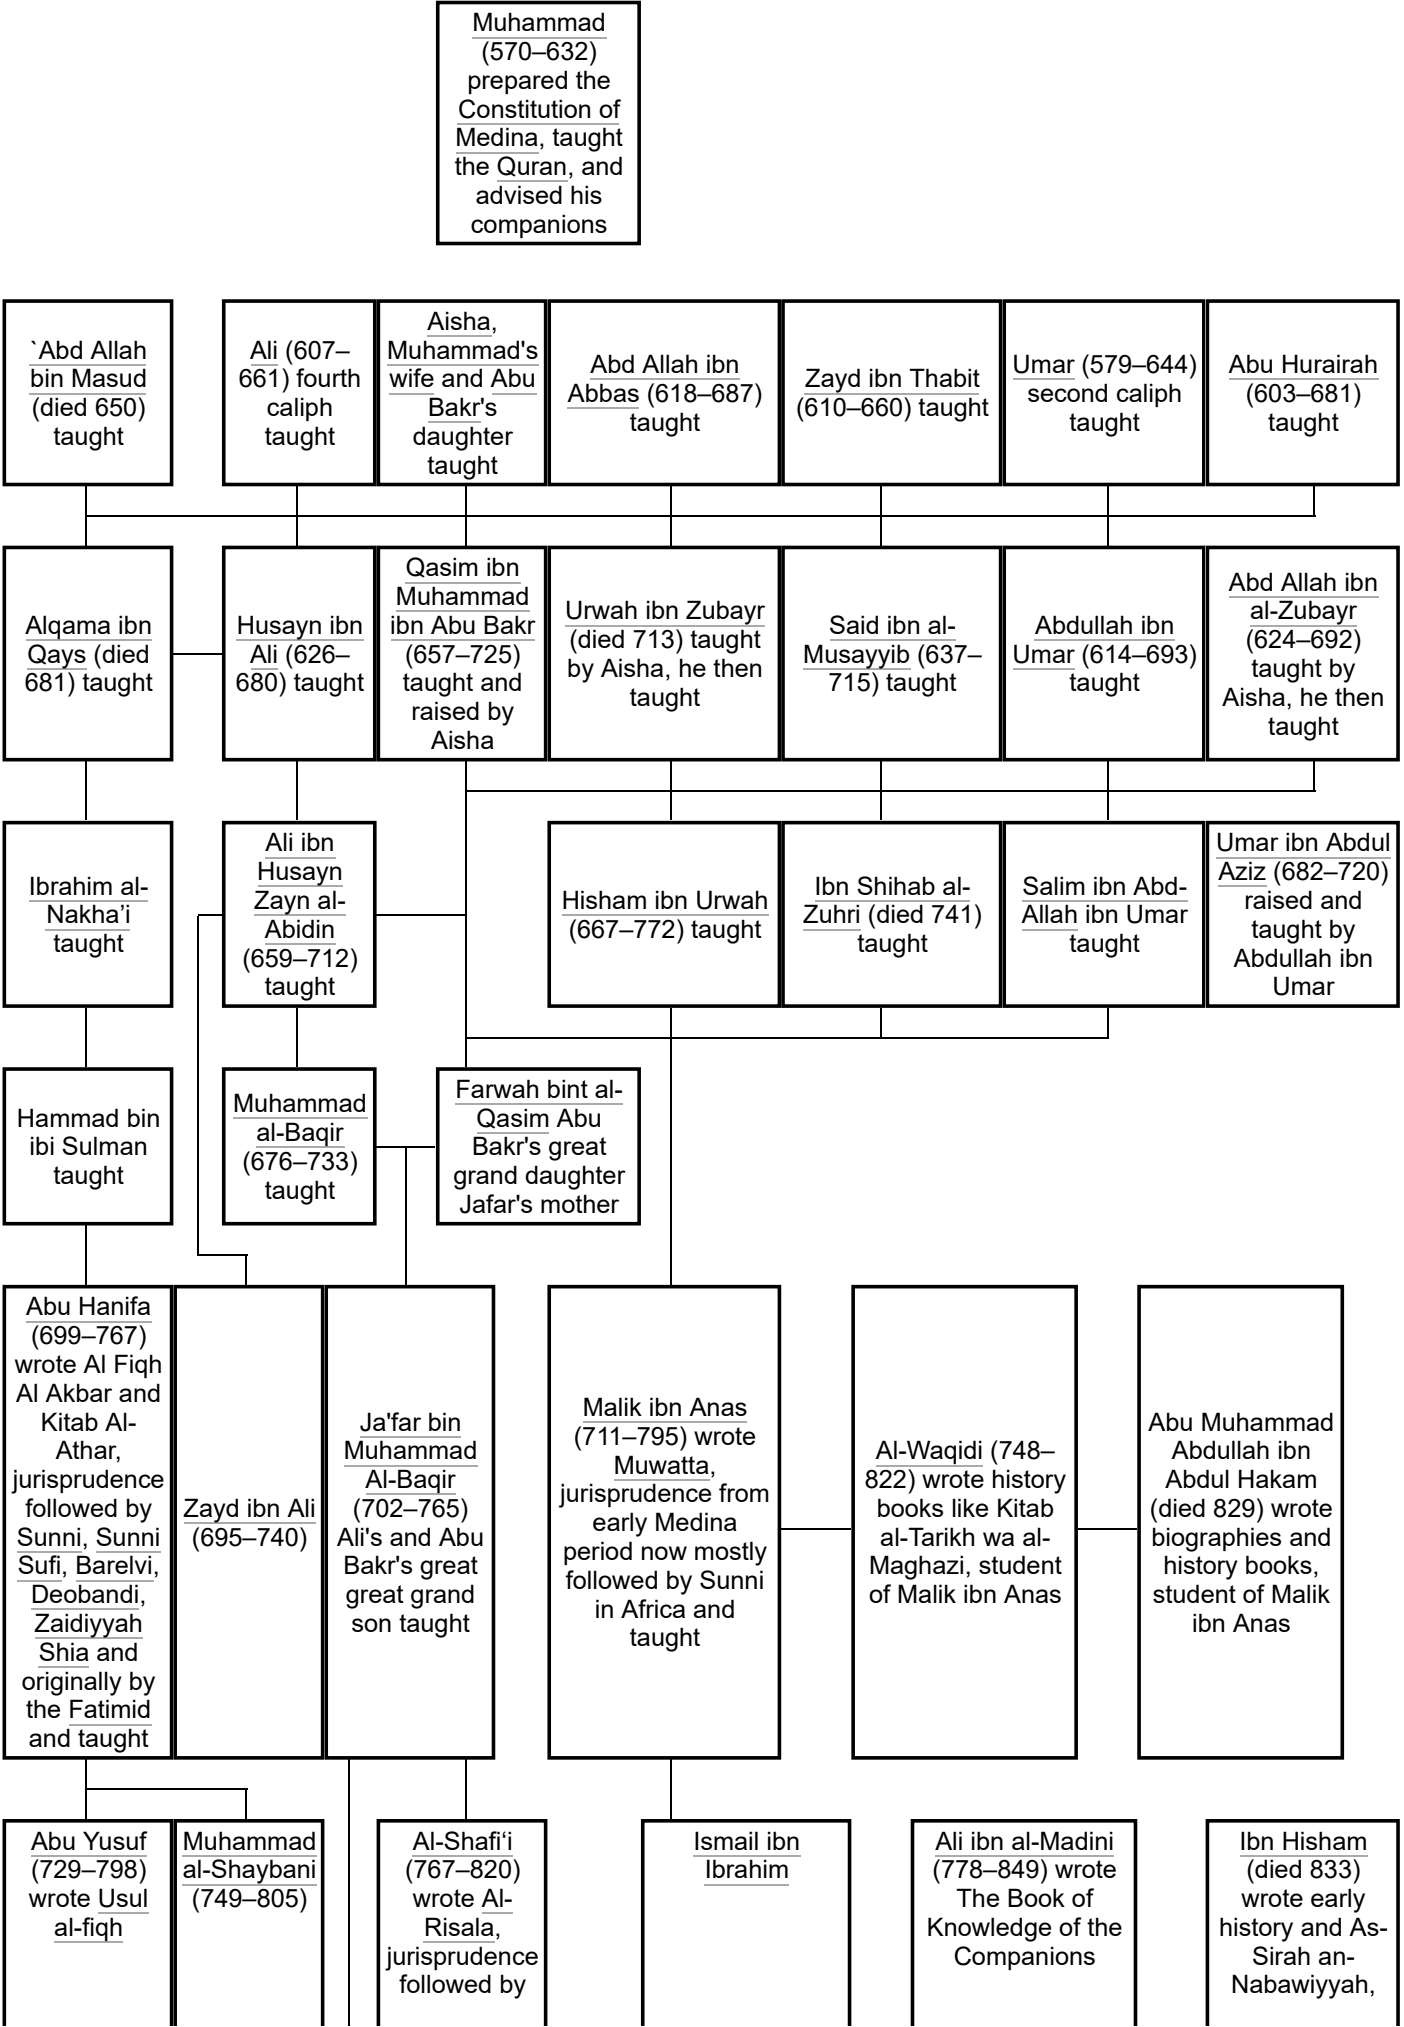

The scholars appearing in the diagram below were taught by Muhammad's companions, many of whom settled in Madina.^[21] Muwatta^[22] by Malik ibn Anas was written as a consensus of the opinion, of these scholars.^{[23][24][25]} The Muwatta^[22] by Malik ibn Anas quotes 13 hadiths from Imam Jafar al-Sadiq.^[26]

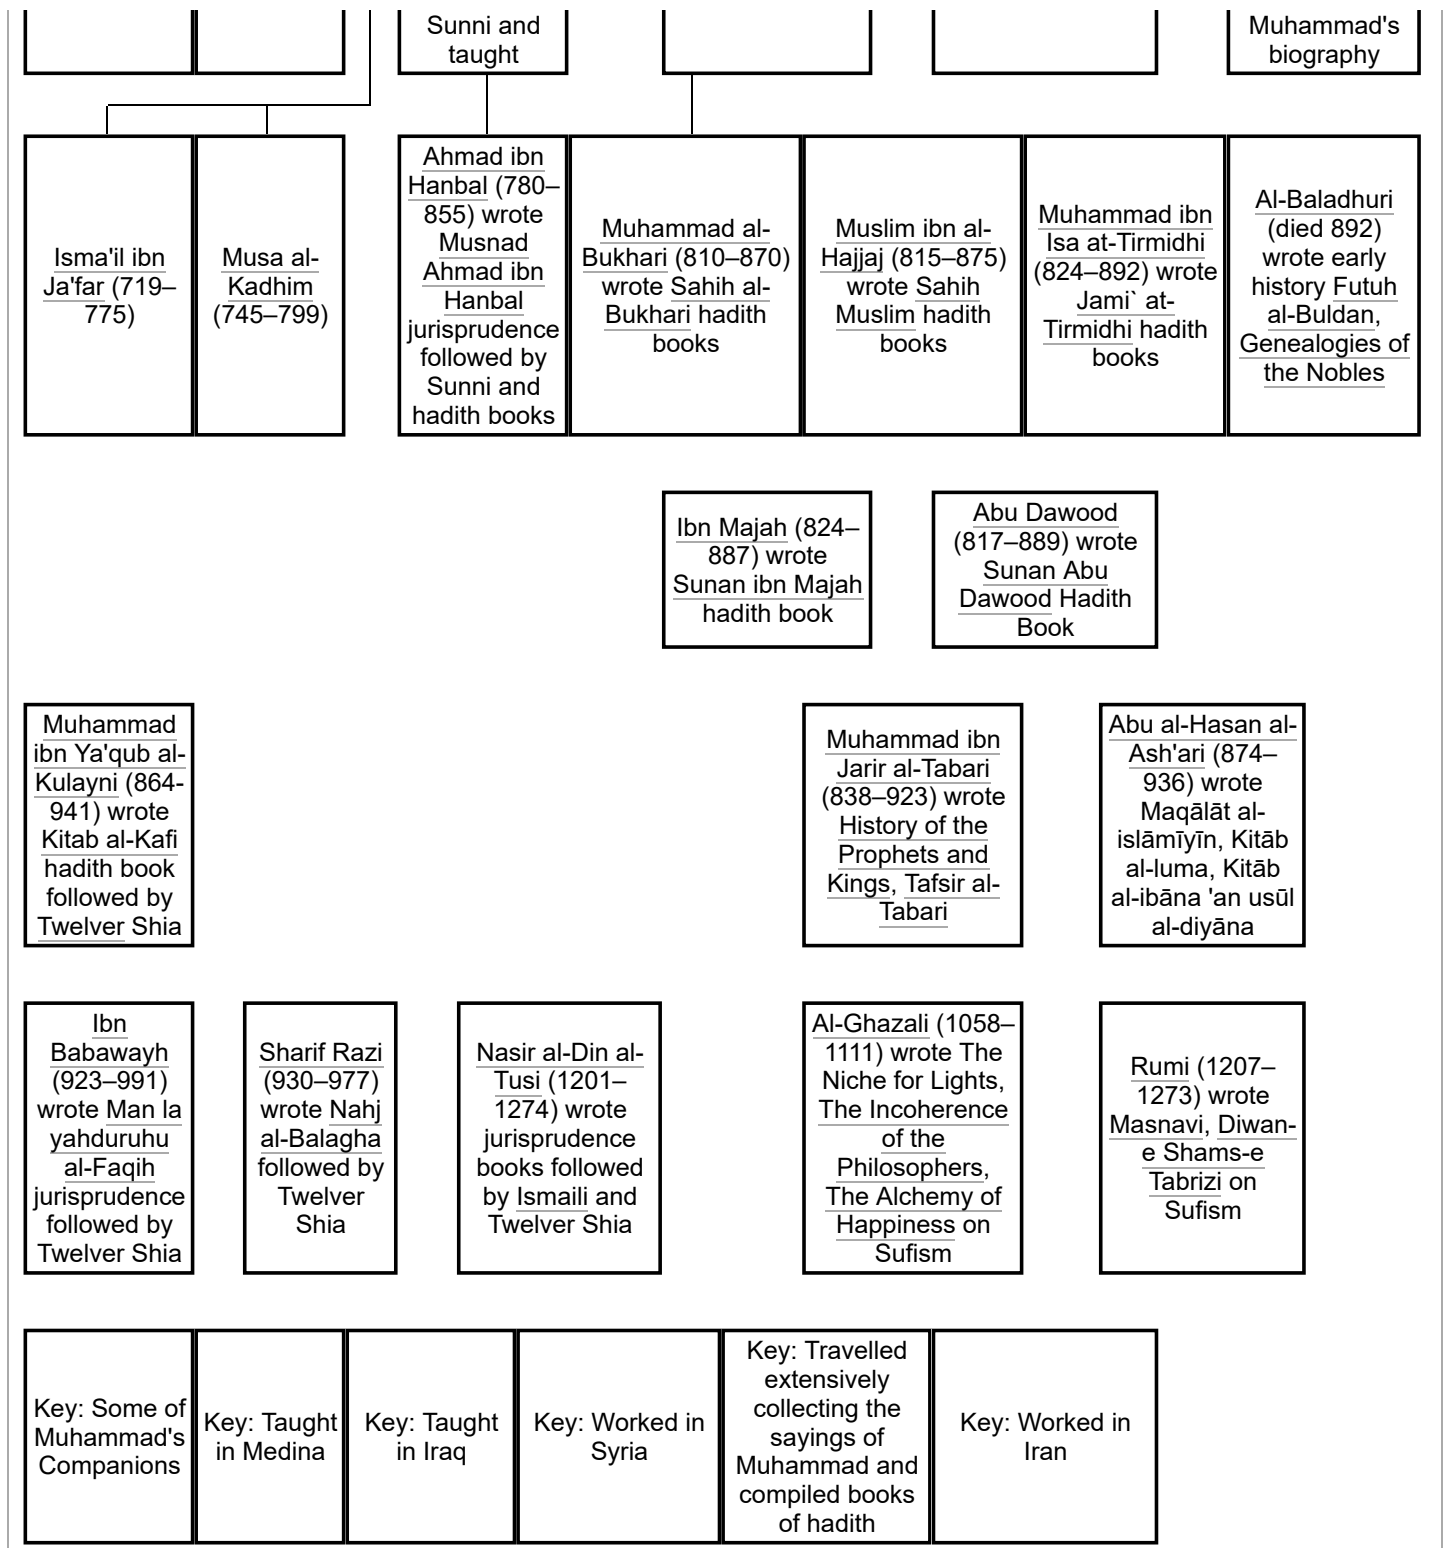

Aisha also taught her nephew Urwah ibn Zubayr. He then taught his son Hisham ibn Urwah, who was the main teacher of Malik ibn Anas whose views many Sunni follow and also taught Jafar al-Sadiq. Qasim ibn Muhammad ibn Abu Bakr, Hisham ibn Urwah and Muhammad al-Baqir taught Zayd ibn Ali, Jafar al-Sadiq, Abu Hanifa, and Malik ibn Anas.

Imam Jafar al-Sadiq, Imam Abu Hanifa and Malik ibn Anas worked together in Al-Masjid an-Nabawi in Medina. Along with Qasim ibn Muhammad ibn Abu Bakr, Muhammad al-Baqir, Zayd ibn Ali and over 70 other leading jurists and scholars.

Al-Shafi'i was taught by Malik ibn Anas. Ahmad ibn Hanbal was taught by Al-Shafi'i. Muhammad al-Bukhari travelled everywhere collecting hadith and his father Ismail ibn Ibrahim was a student of Malik ibn Anas.^{[27][28][29][30][31]}

Early Islamic scholars

In the books actually written by these original jurists and scholars, there are very few theological and judicial differences between them. Imam Ahmad rejected the writing down and codifying of the religious rulings he gave. They knew that they might have fallen into error in some of their judgements and stated this clearly. They never introduced their rulings by saying, "Here, this judgement is the judgement of God and His prophet."^[32] There is also very little text actually written down by Jafar al-Sadiq himself. They all give priority to the Qur'an and the Hadith (the practice of Muhammad). They felt that the Quran and the Hadith, the example of Muhammad provided people with almost everything they needed. "This day I have perfected for you your religion and completed My favor upon you and have approved for you Islam as religion" Quran 5:3.^[33]

These scholars did not distinguish between each other. They were not Sunni or Shia. They felt that they were following the religion of Abraham as described in the Quran "Say: Allah speaks the truth; so follow the religion of Abraham, the upright one. And he was not one of the polytheists" (Qur'an 3:95).

Most of the differences are regarding Sharia laws devised through Ijtihad where there is no such ruling in the Quran or the Hadiths of Islamic prophet Muhammad regarding a similar case.^[32] As these jurists went to new areas, they were pragmatic and continued to use the same ruling as was given in that area during pre-Islamic times, if the population felt comfortable with it, it was just and they used Ijtihad to deduce that it did not conflict with the Quran or the Hadith. As explained in the Muwatta^[22] by Malik ibn Anas.^[23] This made it easier for the different communities to integrate into the Islamic State and assisted in the quick expansion of the Islamic State.

To reduce the divergence, ash-Shafi'i proposed giving priority to the Qur'an and the Hadith (the practice of Muhammad) and only then look at the consensus of the Muslim jurists (ijma) and analogical reasoning (qiyas).^[23] This then resulted in jurists like Muhammad al-Bukhari^[34] dedicating their lives to the collection of the correct Hadith, in books like Sahih al-Bukhari. Sahih translates as authentic or correct. They also felt that Muhammad's judgement was more impartial and better than their own.

These original jurists and scholars also acted as a counterbalance to the rulers. When they saw injustice, all these scholars spoke out against it. As the state expanded outside Madina, the rights of the different communities, as they were constituted in the Constitution of Medina still applied. The Quran also gave additional rights to the citizens of the state and these rights were also applied. Ali, Hassan and Hussein ibn Ali gave their allegiance to the first three caliphs because they abided by these conditions. Later Ali the fourth caliph wrote in a letter "I did not approach the people to get their oath of allegiance but they came to me with their desire to make me their Amir (ruler). I did not extend my hands towards them so that they might swear the oath of allegiance to me but they themselves extended their hands towards me".^[35] But later as fate would have it (Predestination in Islam) when Yazid I, an oppressive ruler took power, Hussein ibn Ali the grandson of Muhammad felt that it was a test from God for him and his duty to confront him. Then Abd Allah ibn al-Zubayr, Qasim ibn Muhammad ibn Abu Bakr's cousin confronted the Umayyad rulers after Hussein ibn Ali was betrayed by the people of Kufa and killed by Syrian Roman Army now under the control of the Yazid I the Umayyad ruler.^[36] Abd Allah ibn al-Zubayr then took on the Umayyads and expelled their forces from Hijaz and Iraq. But then his forces were depleted in Iraq, trying to stop the Khawarij. The Ummayyads then moved in. After a lengthy campaign, in his last hour Abd Allah ibn al-Zubayr asked his mother Asma' bint Abu Bakr the daughter of Abu Bakr the first caliph for advice. Asma' bint Abu Bakr replied to her son, she said:^[37] "You know better in your own self, that if you are upon the truth and you are calling towards the truth go forth, for people more honourable than you have been killed and if you are not upon the truth, then what an evil son you are and you have destroyed yourself and those who are with you. If you say, that if you are upon the truth and you will be killed at the hands of others, then you will not truly be free". Abd Allah ibn al-Zubayr left and was later also killed and crucified by the Syrian Roman Army now under the control of the Umayyads and led by Hajjaj. Muhammad ibn Abi Bakr the son of Abu Bakr the first caliph and raised by Ali the fourth caliph was also killed by the Ummayyads.^[38] Aisha then raised and taught his son Qasim ibn Muhammad ibn Abu Bakr who later taught his grandson Jafar al-Sadiq.

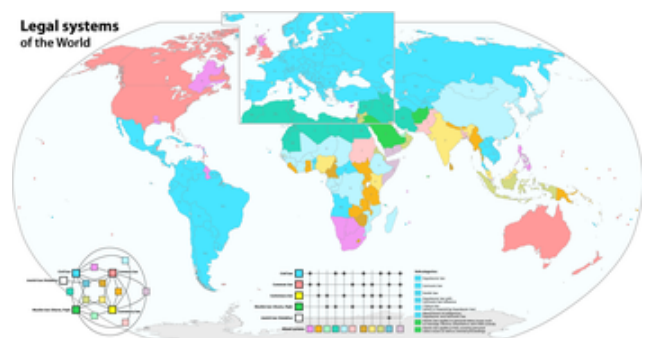

During the early Ummayyad period, there was more community involvement. The Quran and Muhammad's example was the main source of law after which the community decided. If it worked for the community, was just and did not conflict with the Quran and the example of Muhammad, it was accepted. This made it easier for the different communities, with Roman, Persian, Central Asia and North African backgrounds to integrate into the Islamic State and that assisted in the quick expansion of the Islamic State. The scholars in Madina were consulted on the more complex judicial issues. The Sharia and the official more centralized schools of fiqh developed later, during the time of the Abbasids.^[39]

Components

The sources of fiqh in order of importance are

1. the Qur'an
2. Hadith
3. Ijma, i.e. collective reasoning and consensus amongst authoritative Muslims of a particular generation, and its interpretation by Islamic scholars.
4. Qiyas, i.e. analogy which is deployed if Ijma or historic collective reasoning on the issue is not available.^[40]

The Qur'an gives clear instructions on many issues, such as how to perform the ritual purification (wudu) before the obligatory daily prayers (salat), but on other issues,

Legal systems of the world

some Muslims believe the Qur'an alone is not enough to make things clear. For example, the Qur'an states one needs to engage in daily prayers (salat) and fast (sawm) during the month of Ramadan but Muslims believe they need further instructions on how to perform these duties. Details about these issues can be found in the traditions of Muhammad, so Qur'an and Sunnah are in most cases the basis for (Shariah).

Some topics are without precedent in Islam's early period. In those cases, Muslim jurists (Fuqaha) try to arrive at conclusions by other means. Sunni jurists use historical consensus of the community (Ijma); a majority in the modern era also use analogy (Qiyas) and weigh the harms and benefits of new topics (Istislah), and a plurality utilizes juristic preference (Istihsan). The conclusions arrived at with the aid of these additional tools constitute a wider array of laws than the Sharia consists of, and is called fiqh. Thus, in contrast to the sharia, fiqh is not regarded as sacred and the schools of thought have differing views on its details, without viewing other conclusions as sacrilegious. This division of interpretation in more detailed issues has resulted in different schools of thought (madh'hab).

This wider concept of Islamic jurisprudence is the source of a range of laws in different topics that guide Muslims in everyday life.

Component categories

Islamic jurisprudence (fiqh) covers two main areas:

1. Rules in relation to actions, and,
2. Rules in relation to circumstances surrounding actions.

These types of rules can also fall into two groups:

1. Worship (ibadaat)
2. Dealings and transactions (with people) (Mu`amalaat)

Rules in relation to actions ('amaliyya — عملية) or "decision types" comprise:

1. Obligation (fardh)
2. Recommendation (mustahabb)
3. Permissibility (mubah)
4. Disrecommendation (makrooh)
5. Prohibition (haraam)

Rules in relation to circumstances (wadia') comprise:

1. Condition (shart)
2. Cause (sabab)
3. Preventor (mani)
4. Permit / Enforced (rukhsah, azeemah)
5. Valid / Corrupt / Invalid (sahih, fasid, batil)
6. In time / Deferred / Repeat (adaa, qadaa, i'ada)

Methodologies of jurisprudence

The modus operandi of the Muslim jurist is known as usul al-fiqh ("principles of jurisprudence").

There are different approaches to the methodology used in jurisprudence to derive Islamic law from the primary sources. The main methodologies are those of the Sunni, Shi'a and Ibadi denominations. While both Sunni and Shi'ite (Shia) are divided into smaller sub-schools, the differences among the Shi'ite schools is considerably greater. Ibadites only follow a single school without divisions.

Fatawa

While using court decisions as legal precedents and case law are central to Western law, the importance of the institution of fatawa (non-binding answers by Islamic legal scholars to legal questions) has been called "central to the development" of Islamic jurisprudence.^[41] This is in part because of a "vacuum" in the other source of Islamic law, qada` (legal rulings by state appointed Islamic judges) after the fall of the last caliphate the Ottoman Empire.^[15] While the practice in Islam dates back to the time of Muhammad, according to at least one source (Muhammad El-Gamal), it is "modeled after the Roman system of responsa," and gives the questioner "decisive primary-mover advantage in choosing the question and its wording."^[15]

Arguments for and against reform

Each school (madhhab) reflects a unique al-urf or culture (a cultural practice that was influenced by traditions), that the classical jurists themselves lived in, when rulings were made. Some suggest that the discipline of isnad, which developed to validate hadith made it relatively easy to record and validate also the rulings of jurists. This, in turn, made them far easier to imitate (taqlid) than to challenge in new contexts. The argument is, the schools have been more or less frozen for centuries, and reflect a culture that simply no longer exists. Traditional scholars hold that religion is there to regulate human behavior and nurture people's moral side and since human nature has not fundamentally changed since the beginning of Islam a call to modernize the religion is essentially one to relax all laws and institutions.

Early shariah had a much more flexible character, and some modern Muslim scholars believe that it should be renewed, and that the classical jurists should lose special status. This would require formulating a new fiqh suitable for the modern world, e.g. as proposed by advocates of the Islamization of knowledge, which would deal with the modern context. This modernization is opposed by most conservative ulema. Traditional scholars hold that the laws are contextual and consider circumstance such as time, place and culture, the principles they are based upon are universal such as justice, equality and respect. Many Muslim scholars argue that even though technology may have advanced, the fundamentals of human life have not.

Fields of jurisprudence

Criminal · Economics · Etiquette · Family · Hygienical · Inheritance · Marital · Military · Political · Theological

Schools of jurisprudence

There are several schools of fiqh thought (Arabic: madhab; pl. madāhib)

Map of the Muslim world with the main madh'habs.

The schools of Sunni Islam are each named by students of the classical jurist who taught them. The Sunni schools (and where they are commonly found) are

- Hanafi (Turkey, the Balkans, the Levant, Central Asia, Indian subcontinent, China, Egypt, and Russia's Muslim community)
- Maliki (North Africa, West Africa and several of the Arab states of the Persian Gulf)

- Shafi'i (Kurdistan, Indonesia, Malaysia, Brunei, Egypt, East Africa, Southern Yemen, and southern parts of India)
- Hanbali (Saudi Arabia) see Wahhabism
- Zahiri (minority communities in Morocco and Pakistan)
- Jariri, Laythi, Awza'i, Thawri, and Qurtubi no longer exist.

The schools of Shia Islam comprise:

- Ja'fari (Twelver Shia: Iran, Azerbaijan, Iraq, Lebanon, etc.)
- Isma'ili (minority communities in Central Asia, India, and Pakistan)
- Zaydi (Northern Yemen)

Entirely separate from both the Sunni and Shia traditions, Khawarij Islam has evolved its own distinct school.

- Ibadi (Oman)

These schools share many of their rulings, but differ on the particular hadiths they accept as authentic and the weight they give to analogy or reason (qiyas) in deciding difficulties.

The relationship between (at least the Sunni) schools of jurisprudence and the conflict between the unity of the Shariah and the diversity of the schools, was expressed by the 12th century Hanafi scholar Abu Hafs Umar an-Nasafi, who wrote: "Our school is correct with the possibility of error, and another school is in error with the possibility of being correct."^[42]

Influence on Western laws

A number of important legal institutions were developed by Muslim jurists during the classical period of Islam, known as the Islamic Golden Age. One such institution was the Hawala, an early informal value transfer system, which is mentioned in texts of Islamic jurisprudence as early as the 8th century. Hawala itself later influenced the development of the agency in common law and in civil laws such as the aval in French law and the avallo in Italian law.^[43] The "European commenda" (Islamic Qirad) used in European civil law may have also originated from Islamic law.^[44]

The Waqf in Islamic law, which developed during the 7th–9th centuries, bears a notable resemblance to the trusts in the English trust law.^[45] For example, every Waqf was required to have a waqif (settlor), mutawillis (trustee), qadi (judge) and beneficiaries.^[46] The trust law developed in England at the time of the Crusades, during the 12th and 13th centuries, was introduced by Crusaders who may have been influenced by the Waqf institutions they came across in the Middle East.^{[47][48]}

The Islamic lafif was a body of twelve members drawn from the neighbourhood and sworn to tell the truth, who were bound to give a unanimous verdict, about matters "which they had personally seen or heard, binding on the judge, to settle the truth concerning facts in a case, between ordinary people, and obtained as of right by the plaintiff." The only characteristic of the English jury which the Islamic lafif lacked was the "judicial writ directing the jury to be summoned and directing the bailiff to hear its recognition." According to Professor John Makdisi, "no other institution in any legal institution studied to date shares all of these characteristics with the English jury." It is thus likely that the concept of the lafif may have been introduced to England by the Normans, who conquered both England and the Emirate of Sicily, and then evolved into the modern English jury.^[44]

Several other fundamental common law institutions may have been adapted from similar legal institutions in Islamic law and jurisprudence, and introduced to England by the Normans after the Norman conquest of England and the Emirate of Sicily, and by Crusaders during the Crusades. In particular, the "royal English contract protected by the action of debt is identified with the Islamic Aqd, the English assize of novel disseisin is identified with the Islamic Istihqaq, and the English jury is identified with the Islamic lafif." Other English legal institutions such as "the scholastic method, the licence to teach", the "law schools known as Inns of Court in England and Madrasas in Islam" and the "European commenda" (Islamic Qirad) may have also originated from Islamic law.^[44] The methodology of legal precedent and reasoning by analogy (Qiyas) are also similar in both the Islamic and common law systems.^[49] These influences have led some scholars to suggest that Islamic law may have laid the foundations for "the common law as an integrated whole".^[44]

See also

- Outline of Islam
- Glossary of Islam
- Index of Islam-related articles
- Abdallah al-Harari
- Bahar-e-Shariat*
- Ja'fari jurisprudence
- List of Islamic terms in Arabic
- Ma'ruf*
- Mizan*, a comprehensive treatise on the contents of Islam written by Javed Ahmed Ghamidi.
- Palestinian law
- Sources of Islamic law
- Urf*

References

Notes

- for example, Sunni Hanbali scholar/preacher Al-Hasan ibn 'Ali al-Barbahari (d.941) who ruled the streets of Baghdad from 921-941 CE, insisted that "whoever asserts that there is any part of Islam with which the Companions of the Prophet did not provide us has called them [the Companions of the Prophet] liars".^[14]^[14]

Citations

- "fiqh" (<https://www.collinsdictionary.com/dictionary/english/fiqh>). Collins English Dictionary.
- Fiqh (<http://www.britannica.com/EBchecked/topic/207723/fiqh>) Encyclopædia Britannica
- Vogel, Frank E. (2000). Islamic Law and the Legal System of Saudi: Studies of Saudi Arabia (<https://books.google.com/?id=-PfDuvnHMG0C&printsec=frontcover&dq=vogel+islamic+law#v=onepage&q=vogel%20islamic%20law&f=false>). Brill. pp. 4–5. ISBN 9004110623.
- Glasse, Cyril, The New Encyclopedia of Islam, Altamira, 2001, p. 141
- Calder 2009.
- Schneider 2014.
- Mohammad Taqi al-Modarresi (26 March 2016). The Laws of Islam (<http://almodarresi.com/en/books/pdf/TheLawsofIslam.pdf>) (PDF). Enlight Press. ISBN 978-0994240989. Retrieved 22 December 2017.
- Levy (1957). p. 150.
- أنيس, إبراهيم (1998). المعجم الوسيط. بيروت، لبنان: دار الفكر.
- Maghen, Ze'ev (2003). "Dead Tradition: Joseph Schacht and the Origins of "Popular Practice" ". Islamic Law and Society. 10 (3): 276–347. JSTOR 3399422 (<https://www.jstor.org/stable/3399422>).
- "Definition of sharee'ah (sharia), fiqh and usool al-fiqh. 282538" (<https://islamqa.info/en/answers/282538/definition-of-sharee'ah-sharia-fiqh-and-usool-al-fiqh>). Islam Q&A. 20 August 2018. Retrieved 25 November 2019.
- Hawting, "John Wansbrough, Islam, and Monotheism", 2000: p.513
- Hoyland, In God's Path, 2015: p.223
- Cook, Michael (2000). The Koran : A Very Short Introduction (<https://archive.org/details/koranveryshorti00cook>). Oxford University Press. p. 109 (<https://archive.org/details/koranveryshorti00cook/page/n122>). ISBN 0192853449.
- El-Gamal, Islamic Finance, 2006: pp. 30–31
- Weiss, Bernard G. (2002). Studies in Islamic Legal Theory, edited by Bernard G. Weiss, (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 2002. pp. 3, 161.)
- Weiss, Bernard G. (2002). Studies in Islamic Legal Theory, edited by Bernard G. Weiss, (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 2002. p. 162.)
- Nyazee, Imran Ahsan Khan (2000). Islamic Jurisprudence (UsulAl-Fiqh). Islamabad: Islamic Research Institute Press.

19. Islam Vs. West (<https://books.google.com/books?id=gMxjJqurmiAC&pg=PA30&dq=development+of+schools+of+thought+hanifa&hl=en&sa=X&ei=vvMMUe7WLS62hAevmlBw&ved=0CC4Q6AEwAA#v=onepage&q=development%20of%20schools%20of%20thought%20hanifa&f=false>).
20. Islamic State Practices, International Law and the Threat from Terrorism (https://books.google.com/books?id=es9Sunv_y2MC&pg=PA20&dq=development+of+schools+of+thought+hanifa&hl=en&sa=X&ei=vvMMUe7WLS62hAevmlBw&ved=0CE4Q6AEwBQ#v=onepage&q=development%20of%20schools%20of%20thought%20hanifa&f=false).
21. "ulama" (<http://bewley.virtualave.net/ulama.html>).
22. "Muwatta" (<http://bewley.virtualave.net/muwcont.html>).
23. A History of Islamic Law (https://books.google.com/books?id=d5Ks31qHISYC&printsec=frontcover&dq=couls on+history+islamic+law&source=bl&ots=QVA59sVI8G&sig=stT7OrQHTIkIJ6mgK5-kQzT0gAg&hl=en&ei=dur LTOa5KI_QjAe06rnYBw&sa=X&oi=book_result&ct=result&resnum=3&ved=0CCkQ6AEwAg#v=onepage&q&f=false).
24. E. J. Brill's First Encyclopaedia of Islam, 1913–1936 (<https://books.google.com/books?id=Va6oSxzojzoC&pg=PA207&dq=Muwatta+consensus+of+the+opinions+scholars&hl=en&sa=X&ei=vqQLUaSqMKy20QXX1YHwDA&ved=0CC4Q6AEwAA#v=onepage&q=Muwatta%20consensus%20of%20the%20opinions%20scholars&f=false>).
25. Studies in Islamic History and Civilization (https://books.google.com/books?id=0_wUAAAAIAAJ&pg=PA264&dq=Muwatta+consensus+of+the+opinions+scholars&hl=en&sa=X&ei=vqQLUaSqMKy20QXX1YHwDA&ved=0CDQ6AEwAQ#v=onepage&q=Muwatta%20consensus%20of%20the%20opinions%20scholars&f=false).
26. Al-Muwatta of Imam Malik Ibn Anas, translated by Aisha Bewley (Book #5, Hadith #5.9.23) (Book #16, Hadith #16.1.1) (Book #17, Hadith #17.24.43) (Book #20, Hadith #20.10.40) (Book #20, Hadith #20.11.44) (Book #20, Hadith #20.32.108) (Book #20, Hadith #20.39.127) (Book #20, Hadith #20.40.132) (Book #20, Hadith #20.49.167) (Book #20, Hadith #20.57.190) (Book #26, Hadith #26.1.2) (Book #29, Hadith #29.5.17) (Book #36, Hadith #36.4.5) Al-Muwatta (<http://bewley.virtualave.net/muwcont.html>)
27. Understanding Women in Islam (<https://books.google.com/books?id=mlGgGVCp0UcC&pg=PA67&dq=aisha+and+qasim+ibn+muhammad&hl=en&sa=X&ei=fwQpUfqMBYi80QXqs4GoAw&ved=0CEcQ6AEwBA#v=onep age&q=aisha%20and%20qasim%20ibn%20muhammad&f=false>).
28. Classical Islam (<https://books.google.com/books?id=JdjtUTYSL1UC&pg=PA37&dq=aisha+and+qasim+ibn+muhammad&hl=en&sa=X&ei=fwQpUfqMBYi80QXqs4GoAw&ved=0CEwQ6AEwBQ#v=onepage&q=aisha%2 0and%20qasim%20ibn%20muhammad&f=false>).
29. Judaism and Islam in Practice (<https://books.google.com/books?id=GlqeC1ZFAUEC&pg=PT101&dq=aisha+and+qasim&hl=en&sa=X&ei=gwMpUebmBuTC0QXL2ID4CQ&ved=0CDEQ6AEwAA>).
30. "Jafar Al-Sadiq" (http://www.oocities.org/mutmainaa7/people/jafar_al_sadiq.html).
31. "IMAM JAFAR BIN MUHAMMAD AS-SADIQ (AS)" (<http://www.ziaraat.org/jafar.php>).
32. Modernist Islam, 1840–1940 (<https://books.google.com/books?id=W4OKaz5dzdYC&printsec=frontcover&dq=Modernist+Islam,+1840-1940:+A+Sourcebook+By+Charles+Kurzman&hl=en&sa=X&ei=rYP-UKSOC4m70 QXR54HYDA&ved=0CDcQ6AEwAA>).
33. "Surat Al-Ma'idah [5:3] - The Noble Qur'an - القرآن الكريم" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20130925005700/http://q uran.com/5/3>). Archived from the original (<http://quran.com/5/3>) on 25 September 2013. Quran Surah Al-Maaida (Verse 3) (<http://irebd.com/quran/english/surah-5/verse-3/>)
34. Bukhari, Sahih. "Sahih Bukhari : Read, Study, Search Online" (<http://www.sahih-bukhari.com/>).
35. Nahj ul Balagha Letter 54
36. Najeebabadi, Akbar Shah (2001). The History of Islam V.2. Riyadh: Darussalam. p. 110. ISBN 9960-892-88-3.
37. "The Advice of Asmaa bint Abu Bakr (ra) to her son Abdullah Ibn Zubair (ra)" (http://www.ummah.com/forum/showthread.php?347728-The-Advice-of-Asmaa-bint-Abu-Bakr-\(ra\)-to-her-son-Abdullah-Ibn-Zubair-\(ra\)\)-to-her-son-Abdullah-Ibn-Zubair-(ra)))).
38. Nahj al-Balagha Sermon 71, Letter 27, Letter 34, Letter 35
39. Muawiya Restorer of the Muslim Faith By Aisha Bewley p. 68
40. Irshad Abdel Haqq. Ramadan, Hisham M. (ed.). Understanding Islamic Law: From Classical to Contemporary (<https://books.google.com/books?id=5ZS7EaHTQX8C&pg=PA1&dq=Islamic+law:+An+Overvi ew+of+Its+Origins+and+Elements&hl=en&sa=X&ved=0ahUKEwioosO24cnOAhXGNSYKHQImBCgQ6AEIHj AA#v=onepage&q=Islamic%20law%3A%20An%20Overview%20of%20Its%20Origins%20and%20Elements &f=false>). Rowman Altamira. Retrieved 17 August 2016.
41. El-Gamal, Islamic Finance, 2006: p. 32
42. Brown, Jonathan A.C. (2014). Misquoting Muhammad: The Challenge and Choices of Interpreting the Prophet's Legacy (<https://archive.org/details/misquotingmuhamm0000brow/page/50>). Oneworld Publications. pp. 50-51 (<https://archive.org/details/misquotingmuhamm0000brow/page/50>). ISBN 978-1780744209. Retrieved 4 June 2018.

43. Badr, Gamal Moursi (Spring 1978). "Islamic Law: Its Relation to Other Legal Systems". The American Journal of Comparative Law. American Society of Comparative Law. 26 (2 – Proceedings of an International Conference on Comparative Law, Salt Lake City, Utah, 24–25 February 1977): 187–198 [196–98]. doi:10.2307/839667 (https://doi.org/10.2307%2F839667). JSTOR 839667 (https://www.jstor.org/stable/839667).
44. Makdisi 1999
45. Gaudiosi 1988
46. Gaudiosi 1988, pp. 1237–40
47. Hudson 2003, p. 32
48. Gaudiosi 1988, pp. 1244–45
49. El-Gamal, Mahmoud A. (2006). Islamic Finance: Law, Economics, and Practice (https://archive.org/details/islamicfinancela00elga). Cambridge University Press. p. 16 (https://archive.org/details/islamicfinancela00elga/page/n35). ISBN 0-521-86414-3.

Bibliography

- Doi, Abd ar-Rahman I., and Clarke, Abdassamad (2008). Shari'ah: Islamic Law. Ta-Ha Publishers Ltd., ISBN 978-1-84200-087-8 (hardback)
- Cilardo, Agostino, "Fiqh, History of", in Muhammad in History, Thought, and Culture: An Encyclopedia of the Prophet of God (2 vols.), Edited by C. Fitzpatrick and A. Walker, Santa Barbara, ABC-CLIO, 2014, Vol I, pp. 201–206.
- El-Gamal, Mahmoud A. (2006). Islamic Finance : Law, Economics, and Practice (https://web.archive.org/web/20180403160351/http://iugc.yolasite.com/resources/Reference%20Book%2004%20-%20Islamic%20finance,%20law%20economics%20and%20practice,%20M.%20El%20Gamal.pdf) (PDF). Cambridge University Press. Archived from the original (http://iugc.yolasite.com/resources/Referen ce%20Book%2004%20-%20Islamic%20finance,%20law%20economics%20and%20practice,%20 M.%20El%20Gamal.pdf) (PDF) on 3 April 2018. Retrieved 28 February 2017.
- Gaudiosi, Monica M (April 1988). "The Influence of the Islamic Law of Waqf on the Development of the Trust in England_ The Case of Merton College" (http://scholarship.law.upenn.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi? article=3909&context=penn_law_review). University of Pennsylvania Law Review. The University of Pennsylvania Law Review. 136 (4): 1231–1261. doi:10.2307/3312162 (https://doi.org/10.2307%2F3312162). JSTOR 3312162 (https://www.jstor.org/stable/3312162).
- Hawting, G.R. (2000). "16. John Wansbrough, Islam, and Monotheism". The Quest for the Historical Muhammad. New York: Prometheus Books. pp. 489–509.
- Levy, Reuben (1957). The Social Structure of Islam (https://archive.org/details/socialstructureo0000levy). UK: Cambridge University Press. ISBN 978-0-521-09182-4.
- Makdisi, John A. (June 1999). "The Islamic Origins of the Common Law". North Carolina Law Review. 77 (5): 1635–1739.

Further reading

- Potz, Richard, Islamic Law and the Transfer of European Law (http://nbn-resolving.de/urn:nbn:de:0159-2011112127), European History Online, Mainz: Institute of European History, 2011. (Retrieved 28 November 2011.)

External links

-  Media related to Islamic jurisprudence at Wikimedia Commons

Retrieved from "https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Fiqh&oldid=975233351"

This page was last edited on 27 August 2020, at 14:19 (UTC).

Text is available under the Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike License; additional terms may apply. By using this site, you agree to the Terms of Use and Privacy Policy. Wikipedia® is a registered trademark of the Wikimedia Foundation, Inc., a non-profit organization.